I Love this Community — EDWARD POWERS & THE WU THEATRE

By Colleen Nelson

T's a rainy April afternoon and I'm sitting in Goodwin Performing Arts Center at Waynesburg University, catching the last few minutes of a "duet acting scene" from Neil Simon's classic "Barefoot in the Park". The props are minimal - wooden benches and stools standing in for tables and couches.

The actors in training, freshmen Haley Pattison and Will Goslee, read dialog from their smart phones as they move through the comedic motions of newlyweds learning to live and love together. This is rehearsal; in a few days the dual performances of the entire class will be graded.

Instructor Edward Powers sits in the front row, illuminated by the stage lighting as he gestures his critique after the performance. He's in his element now; drama coach, teacher and stage director, giving his students one last semester of instruction and advice before his own curtain call.

After 24 years and 100 plays, musicals, original scripts and one-man shows, Powers is retiring from the stage at WU to take on a new adventure or three, back in his hometown in Clarksville, Tennessee.

But today is all about the present as his voice pulls us into the moment that is so essential for actors to be in whenever they step onstage to tell a story that mirrors real life back to the audience.

"Don't drop the character—keep living it on stage. That's one of the toughest things to do as a listening actor—to be in the moment while waiting for the cue."

Powers remembers his senior year at Austin Peay State University in 1978, doing an existential play where his character waited pages for his next line. "Our minds tend to wander, but you have to still maintain that character." He tells us of the dramatic pace of that year that gave him his career. "I did five major shows plus about four one acts, and I directed as well. We were a factor, we were just tearing the place down."

Graduate school at the University of Memphis found Powers in full command of "all kinds of accents"—proper Brit, Cockney Irish, German, Russian, American. "When I got there, people thought I was from Iowa or someplace like that. But I can get my Tennessee accent out at the drop of a hat!"

While teaching at Hiwasee College in Madisonville, Tennessee, the small historic liberal arts college began suffering financial difficulties and Powers began submitting his application to schools beyond his home state. He arrived on campus at Waynesburg College in 2000 and by that fall, his students were putting on the play "Rumors" by Neil Simon.

With a nod to time coming full circle, "This past fall we did "Rumors" again."

Haley Pattison, from North Cambria, is majoring in Marine Biology. She tells me she found her love of aquatics going ocean fishing with her dad when she was 12 and marveling over crabs, corals and jellyfish. But her love for theater came in 11th grade when her school began offering drama classes. "I loved listening to musical sound tracks. Then my aunt took me to see a live performance, and it was Hamilton that did it. Once I'm hooked, I go for it!"

Powers is smiling. "This freshman class has some strong talent. I hate to leave them. It's hard to say goodbye. There is a value to theater. With each story on stage, we are learning a little bit who we are. Whether maid or narrator, scarecrow, tin man or a cowardly lion, we're dealing with the human condition."

For Powers's last spring musical, "Blood Brothers", set in Liverpool in the 1960s, he let his students forgo accents in order to better focus on the emotional drama of two fraternal twin brothers raised at differing ends of the socio-economic spectrum and how it affects their lives when they fall in love with the same girl.

Powers nods in satisfaction. "It was an exceptional performance, especially since it was a musical, and they also had to concentrate on singing."

Now, as the semester and the school year end, there are still acting exercises for his students to practice until they become second nature, things that nail down the finer details of bringing the stage persona to life. There will be a last rehearsal tomorrow for me to sit in on and observe.

As I settle in my seat the next afternoon, the rehearsal is finished, and the critique is ongoing. Haley, Goslee and fellow freshman Liz Dechellis from Pittsburgh are sitting on the edge of the stage, listening and asking questions. Powers is breaking down in measured terms how actors keep their place on stage while speaking each word.

What can be done between classes, he posits, what can be done between rehearsals, to fine tune a performance? Well, you might write some lines and decide where you'll be standing onstage, rehearse in mind's eye the movement along with the words, Powers tells them, each syllable clear enough to be heard to the last seat. "I move on this line—this way. I move on this line—that way. It might seem like a piddly little nothing but this is an important acting assignment."

When I ask Dechellis, who played Mrs. Lyons in "Blood Brothers", what theater does for her, she projects her voice from the stage as she explains that her love of singing led her to musicals, then acting. "We do a lot of these exercises and they help with the small details. I've learned a lot. It's a life skill that helps me in the arts and also with my everyday life."

For Goslee, who hails from Delaware, it's a family affair. "My mom was an actress for a while, and I wanted to give it a try."

Now it's time to put away the props and strike a pose for the story. I tell them to create a scene and where everyone is in just the right pose, and one of the twenty photos I'll shoot will capture it.

Powers gets into the act and we all laugh our way into the moment that will make the final cut when this story is published.

Carmichaels Center for Performing Arts

By Danielle Nyland

To nvolvement in the arts is almost always new movie. Also, they are familiar with the beneficial for children, creating well-L rounded children. Musical theatre offers valuable benefits to children: self-confidence, creative self-expression, enhanced social skills and friendships, increased memory, intellectual growth, and more. Susan Zalar understands the importance of providing opportunities like this to our area youth.

Almost 30 years ago, Susan Zalar opened the Center for Performing Arts in the former fire hall in Carmichaels, bringing more opportunities for dance and musical theatre to Greene County. In those years, she's seen the importance of musical theatre for herself. Through the Center for Performing Arts, students have been able to creatively explore their identity on stage and make lasting memories.

This May, the students of the Center for the Performing Arts (CPA) will present two shows in the Stan Ferek Auditorium at Carmichaels Area Middle and Senior High School. The CPA's Junior Company will be performing "Matilda", and the Senior to call the little ones 'maggots'. It makes me Company will perform "Descendants."

The decision to choose "Matilda" was an easy one: "There were lots of incoming little ones to the program, and they love the songs. It's a nice introduction to theatre," says Director Kyleigh Polish-Angelo.

The role of Matilda will be played by Marklee Beal, age nine. "I am very excited to play the role of Matilda as this is the first time I will be in a lead role. I love acting, singing, and dancing."

The part of Lavender, Matilda's friend, will be played by Joelle Katruska, age nine. She is especially excited to portray Lavender: "I love the role of Lavender because she is Matilda's best friend. Marklee and I are best friends, so it's fun that we get to be in this role together both on and off the

Miss Honey, Matilda's teacher, will be portrayed by 12-year-old Karis Spector. She loved the show's happy ending and, "Also, I enjoy the music!"

The main antagonist of Matilda, Miss Trunchbull, will be played by Stacee Palmer, age 11, who enjoys being the villain in Matilda. "My favorite part is getting

To prepare for the performance, students had weekly rehearsals on Thursdays and currently on Saturday mornings. Each student has a script that they can practice at home. Many students have been watching the musical to better understand the characters and their personalities. Their classes are composed of 30 minutes of movement, 30 minutes of drama and 30 minutes of voice. In addition, the students play games to get warmed Facebook. up and ready for class.

RAMPING UP TRANSPORTATION

rolling hills, lively farmland, covered bridges, and tranquil forests. While the natural scenery of the county brings joy to its residents, it also unfortunately isolates a portion of it who do not have access to reliable transportation. Blueprints is partnering with Carnegie Mellon University, Waynesburg University, and the Greene County Commissioners to pilot a project called RAMP with hopes of closing these transportation gaps.

"Transportation is critical to so many aspects of life," said Jeff Fondelier, CEO of Blueprints. "In a rural county where true public transportation is unavailable, there is a limit to where one can work, shop, access healthcare or seek opportunities to RAMP, short for Rural Access Mobility Platform, is a research project funded by the US Department of Energy. This pilot project will test the viability of a microtransit on-demand shared mobility service, similar to Lyft or Uber, in the rural areas of Greene County.

The initiative aims to improve the efficiency and availability of transportation to those who are not eligible for Greene County Transportation or do not have a reliable personally owned vehicle. It will provide opportunities to access essential needs and services such as food, employment, security, healthcare, or civic activity

"RAMP can ultimately help the vibrancy of Greene County," added Fondelier who has been with Blueprints since 2004. "It can help connect people who can and want to work to meaningful employment; it can help those struggling with food insecurity access nutrition; it can improve health outcomes by helping people access routine their support and guidance.

reene County boasts a landscape of and more emergent care; and it can engage people in the Greene County community."

From May 1 until August, those looking to utilize the service will need to register for a ride by accessing the platform at www.ramp-pilot.com or by calling 724-780 RAMP (7267). Blueprints will have three Honda vans running routes from 8am 5pm Monday through Friday. Two vans will be "On-Demand" and one will act as a static shuttle between Waynesburg and Carmichaels with trips to Washington and Morgantown available as well.

Once initiated via website or phone call, the ride system will provide an estimated time for pick up and drop off. Since the platform requires internet access, routes will be limited to areas of the county with cell coverage to ensure the safety of all drivers and riders.

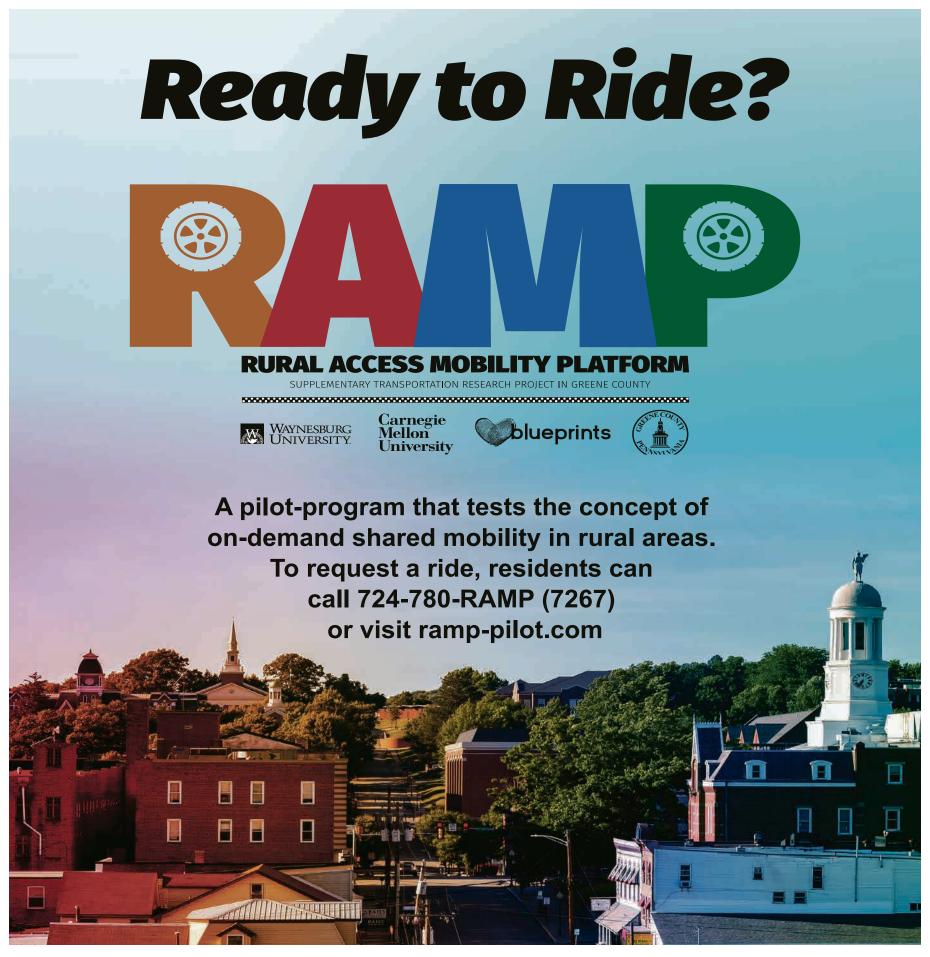

Fondelier also noted that RAMP is not intended to displace existing Greene County Transportation services, but rather to complement it. Those eligible for Greene County Transportation should continue to

It additionally seeks to use this temporary opportunity for research purposes to quantify the impact of the service. If successful, there may be long-term financial support opportunities to continue the operation of RAMP in Greene County. Rider feedback may also be used to adjust the days or hours of operation.

Fondelier would like to thank Sean Qian, Ph.D. from CMU, the primary researcher, who brought the project to Greene County and to Blueprints, and Stacey Brodak, from Waynesburg University, who has been integral to the preliminary research and planning. Lastly, he is grateful to the Greene County Commissioners for

VETERANS CORNER

AREA VETERAN CELEBRATING 100 YEARS

Tn an age where we take many of our blessings for granted, and often neglect the remembrance of those who work tirelessly to preserve our liberties, the life of nearly 100-vear-old veteran Orlando Prete shows a true picture of sacrifice by his actions both on and off the field of combat.

Prete was born in Masontown on May 25, 1924, three years after his parents, Nazarene and Anna Prete, immigrated to America from Italy. The Prete family soon moved to the coal patch community of Bobtown, and started a homestead in Shannopin Mine's company housing, part of Jones and Laughlin Steel Company, where Orlando's father was employed. Neither parent spoke English and life was challenging, but the family was hardworking and determined. Even as a young child, Orlando followed suit. His daughter, Diana Gronholm, shares from stories that her father "was really a wholesome kid," who stayed out of trouble and was extremely mature and thoughtful. When he was young, Orlando loved music, and saved up enough money to buy himself a guitar and occasionally go to tipple operator there. Soon a movie at the company cinema.

In the years following the Great Depression, Orlando eventually left high school in order to help support his family. "People were just trying their best to make ends meet," Diana liams on a blind date. Their says. "His family was one of many." Orlando applied for a job at the mine as well, but with a proposition to only work outside. His wish was respected, and Orlando spent the entirety of his mining career above ground.

Soon, however, a new challenge arose—one that Orlando again met head-on: World War II. John Michniak, an area coordinator for Greene County veterans, provides insight into Prete's incredible military career. On January 19, 1943, Prete enlisted in the United States Navy at only 19 years of age. (Later in the war, his naval unit was transferred to the U.S. Marine Corps.) After receiving his Navy Training Course in the fall of 1944, Prete earned the title of Pharmacist's Mate Second Class. During his tour of duty, mostly on the Pacific Front, Prete fought valiantly for his country, most recognizably in Guadalcanal and the Battle of Okinawa, which was, as Michniak explains, "the largest amphibious assault in the Pacific Theatre of World War II." Prete was wounded in combat in Okinawa on June 3, 1945, nearly losing his leg, and received many honors for his bravery, most notably the Purple Heart Award and the Presidential Unit Citation for "extraordinary heroism in action against enemy..." Prete also was awarded the Good Conduct Ribbon, both American and Pacific Theatre Ribbons, and the Victory Medal. He was treated for his severe wounds in Oahu, Hawaii and San Francisco, California before returning home to Pennsylvania, being honorably discharged February 2, 1946.

After his recovery, Prete returned to Shannopin Mine, and eventually became the after his return home, Prete was introduced to a woman by the name of Mary Wilmeeting was a "love at first sight" encounter, and the two married on October 22, 1949.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Prete moved to Dilliner, where they eventually raised three children: Diana, Mark, and Kathy. In 1950, a new chapter in their lives began.

As strikes in the mine became more frequent, Prete and his brother, Louis ("Wegie"), opened a local business to supplement their family's income, and "Prete's Texaco" service station was born. In 1966, the two Prete brothers, along with their wives, ventured into another business opportunity and opened "Prete's Twin Twister Ice Cream", built from scratch on a piece of property just across the street from the gas station.

One customer with fond memories of Prete and the ice cream stand is the aforementioned John Michniak, who has honored Prete in several veteran ceremonies. Michniak was a young boy playing little league baseball when he met Prete, and he cherishes the memories spent eating ice cream in his store, and visiting with the man so many looked up to. "I think he's great," Michniak says. "He's such a humble guy."

It was in this humility that Prete would always go the extra mile in order to help someone else. "The phone would ring fafter hours when the station was closed] and it was someone needing car assistance. My dad would always find a way to help them out," Diana remembers. "He was supportive forever, always there for us. God and family were his priorities."

Those priorities continued to shape Prete's life from his retirement in 1988 and beyond. Flare-ups from his leg wounds would occur now and again, but the war remained an absent topic of conversation in the family. "He always kept going though, he didn't miss a beat!" says Diana. Prete remained an active member of St. Ignatius Catholic Church, and used his retirement to travel the world with his beloved wife, taking road trips across the country to visit family, many excursions, bus tours, and cruises. Sadly, Mrs. Prete developed lung cancer, and Orlando dedicated himself to her care at home. She passed away in 1997, and Orlando faced the greatest battle since the war.

Yet he kept going, making the best of every moment with his beloved family, continuing with church activities, and pursuing his lifelong passion for gardening. Another of his favorite outings became visiting the casino with a conservative limit to spend, but a liberal amount of friends and family in tow. Prete currently lives at Country Meadows in Bridgeville, where he still lives independently.

Mr. Prete will be honored for his service on May 26 at 1pm at the Greensboro VFW Post 6303 during the annual Memorial Day Service—one day after his 100th birthday.

Michniak states, "Our country is trying to forget our history." But by honoring those who have dedicated their lives to preserving the American Dream, we won't let that happen.

Greene Artifacts By Matthew Cumberledge. GCHS Executive Director

THREE BRIDGES OVER TEN MILE

he purpose of an artifact, largely, is across Ten Mile at this point. to tell a story or recall some element L of past human history so that we can be reminded of and learn from history. This artifact does just that. Donated to the GCHS in 2023, this model of the old "double barrel" covered bridge that crossed Ten Mile Creek on Rt. 21 at the present location of McDonalds.

There were many covered bridges making routes over waterways throughout the countryside in years gone by. The double bridge in Morrisville, or Dotysburg, was exceptional due to its ability to carry two lanes of traffic over Ten Mile because double bridges were not common in this area. Many thousands of buggies and transports would have traveled over the covered bridge, as well as convoys of livestock and wagons of goods to be moved to various points all throughout the county.

In 1928, heavier traffic required a new bridge be built crossing Ten Mile. That year, the Veterans Memorial Bridge, or Freedom Bridge, was built alongside the old two laned covered bridge. They would stand together, side by side, crossing Ten Mile, before the covered bridge was removed. The Freedom Bridge would be the only mode of travel

By 2014, the Freedom Bridge had fallen into disrepair and was no longer meeting the needs of the heightened traffic flow on Rt. 21 through Waynesburg. It was decided that a new bridge would be built to widen the road from two lanes to four lanes, allowing two lanes of traffic to move in each direction.

The new bridge was completed by October 2017. Widening the road also came with the necessity of expanding the railroad overpass that crossed over Rt. 21, as well. This new bridge and road widening project improved the flow of traffic through that once-narrow corridor.

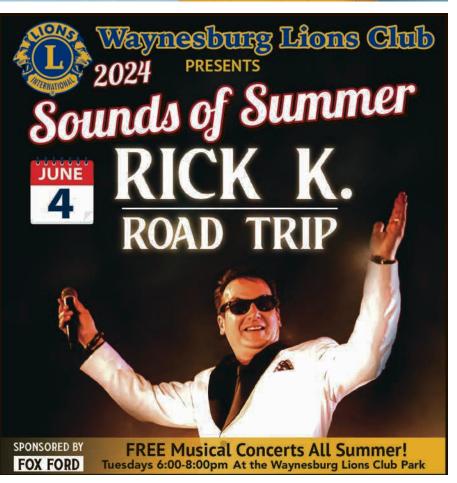

Please keep an eye out on the GCHS Website and Facebook page for information on the upcoming Opening Day and the 2024 season so that you can check it this model for yourself!

Greene: When it floods in greene county pril showers bring May flowers, and curred, but it wasn't in the springwhat do Mayflowers bring? Pilgrims! April showers bring something else as well: seasonal flooding in and around southwestern Pennsylvania. I think all us residents of Greene County have dealt with the consequences of flooding in one way or another, whether it's damaged property, closed roads, mudslides, or school closures. It's become a part of the annual cycle here.

As someone who grew up and still lives along Dunkard Creek in Brave, we knew every year when we were all school children, we'd get free days off from school due to the flooding in Brave. The buses were unable to make it in or out of town, and so we got to stay home and play hooky – and not have to worry about making up the missed days at the end of the year.

Not everyone has fond memories of flooding in Greene County. Over the years many of the businesses along Ten Mile in the area around McDonalds have suffered great damage due to floods, and many private July floods, was hit by rain on homes have fallen prey to floodwaters and the associated mudslides.

In Rices Landing, the Kline and Waltons Drugstore was demolished, and the bridge at Millsboro that crossed Ten Mile Creek was destroyed. The press estimated total damage throughout the county to have exceeded $2.5 million which would be more than $81 million in today's money.

GREENE COUNTY ECLIPSE PARTIES

On Monday, April 8, friends, neighbors, and familes in southwestern PA communities gathered to celebrate the partial ecliipse traveling across the sky. Three notable eclipse parties in Greene were held at the Flenniken Public Library, Ryerson Station State Park, and RGB Coffee in Waynesburg.

Prioir to the eclipse, both Greene County libraries offered eclipse glasses to community members in need. The eclipse party at Flenniken featured eclipse-themed snacks, out-of-this-world cupcakes, eclipse activities, and news coverage of the event.

RGB Coffee gave away 50 eclipse glasses with drink purchases (starting at noon), then another 100 pairs at 1pm. Patrons were able to enjoy their drinks outside at tables and chairs and follow the eclipse's path.

Community members also gathered at Ryerson Station State Park's swimming pool parking lot with chairs to listen to a short presentation and view the eclipse. Ryerson Station State Park also provided glasses for viewers.

CRAWFORD PARK RIBBON CUTTING

The Greene County Chamber of Commerce recently hosted an official ribbon cutting ceremony for the Franklin Township Supervisors at Crawford Park. On March 15, Franklin Township Supervisors Corbly Orndorff, Todd Hoy, and William Walker were joined by township staff/employees, local dignitaries, and the Greene County Honor Guard to cut the ribbon on this project that took years in the making.

Greene County Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Melody Longstreth welcomed those in attendance. The celebration started with the Greene County Honor Guard holding a flag ceremony. All three supervisors spoke of the behind-the-scenes details regarding the process of the project. The event featured remarks from retired state representative Pam Snyder, and PA State Senator Camera Bartolotta. Multiple state grants secured by Snyder and Bartolotta as well as donors such as EQT and BHE GT&S, a Berkshire Hathaway Energy Company were involved in the creation of this project that will bring joy to many locals in the community. After the official cutting of the ribbon, those in attendance had the opportunity to converse and enjoy lunch at the park.

GCCTC FOOD TRUCK RIBBON CUTTING

County Career & Technology Center's Culinary Arts department food truck.

For approximately 18 months, Dave Calvario of the CFGC worked alongside Mark Krupa and Dan Wagner of the GCCTC to carry out this countywide effort to bring our communities and school districts together to impact work force development.

The evening started with a welcome from GCCTC director Mark Krupa, followed by words from Dave Calvario, GCCTC Culinary Arts Teacher Dan Wagner, student Ellie Turner, and student Dylan Wilson. Following the speakers, attendees enjoyed refreshments.

Some of those in attendance were representatives from Jesmar Energy, Gatrell Business Solutions, the Community Foundation of Greene County, Moore Monuments, RG Johnson, Smalley Electric, PA National Loging and Restaurant Association, D.J.'s Diner, Waynesburg VFW, Coles Greene Acres Farm, Greene County Tourism, Hoy's Concrete, Baily Agency, Fox Ford, First Federal, Jennmar, Iron Senergy, Community Bank, KSW Oilfield Services, McCracken's Pharmacy, Wilson Accounting, & Direct Results for their contributions. Buddy Greco, Donna Rinehart, and Albie Rinehart were recognized as individual donors.

Other significant roles such as the joint operating committee and various CTC students lined up to cut the ribbon. As the confetti started to fall, nothing but smiles could be seen with the hopes and dreams for the future of this truck. Dave Calvario is looking forward to "seeing the Culinary Arts students with a little more bounce in their step. To have the students forward facing, interacting with the public, serving their teachers, and to obtain hands-on experience through this mobile classroom."

into their fire apparatus. This collision prevention service enables the delivery of real time gram! alerts to Pennsylvania drivers when emergency services are active in the vicinity.

Safety Cloud boosts driver compliance with Move Over laws by dispatching real time notifications when first responders are enroute or on scene when emergency lights are operating. This digital solution effectively enhances lightbars and sirens with additional in-vehicle notification, minimizing the likelihood of collisions with first responders.

Safety Cloud's digital alerting delivers immediate warnings to drivers of the proximity of emergency vehicles or road workers. This preemptive measure significantly reduces collision risks by up to 90%, safeguarding both first responders and the motoring public.

Despite Pennsylvania's Move Over laws necessitating drivers to decelerate and change lanes when approaching active emergency vehicles, delayed or non-compliant reactions persist. Safety Cloud addresses this issue by providing up to 30 seconds of preemptive warning, facilitating safer responses.

The alerts are accessible via the Waze navigation app and Apple Maps, compatible with mobile devices and integrated into the dashboard of many modern vehicles. Safety Cloud alerts are also available on the infotainment screens of millions of vehicles. specifically 2018 and newer models of Jeep, Ram, Chrysler, and Dodge through the EVAS (Emergency Vehicle Alert System) feature. HAAS Alert is actively working on broadening the alerts to more platforms and vehicles.

"We started looking at this technology a few years ago, then when South Strabane Fire Department had their truck struck on Interstate 70, we realized we needed this technology in our apparatus," said Fire Chief Jeff Marshall.

"Adopting Safety Cloud adds a layer of protection for our firefighters, facilitating their operations with enhanced safety," said Chief Marshall. "By providing drivers with additional time to respond appropriately, this service establishes a safer environment for both our crew and surrounding motorists. We strongly recommend drivers to utilize Waze and Apple Maps, both free-to-use apps, to benefit from these vital road safety alerts."

The cost of this technology was offset through financial support from Fox Ford of Waynesburg. Chief Marshall added that the Fox family have been generational members of the fire department and the contributions the family has made over the years are many. Mark Fox, President of Fox Ford added "I know from almost 50 years of experience with the Waynesburg Franklin Twp Fire Company how critical first responder safety is, and this new HAAS technology will definitely make emergency responses safer. Our family is pleased to help with making this technology possible for our fire company."

A Who's Who of Greene County Athletes

or many people, sports are a visceral link to their past and a source of community, regional and national pride. The people of Greene County have always been proud of their athletic heritage. This issue of the Greene Scene is celebrating the accomplishments of our fellow Countians, both past and present. The following individuals have represented our County at the highest levels of their respective sports.

If we were to go way back in our history, Willis Hutchins of Brave broke the 100-Yard-Dash World Record in 1914. Thirteen years later, Edward Tegue of Waynesburg broke the Quarter Mile World Record at the Penn Relays in Philadelphia. Jumping ahead a century, many people today know Dave Palone of Dry Tavern holds the World Record for wins in Harness Rac-

As to team success, Hundred native and Waynesburg College alum Lee King drove in the series winning run in the 1922 World Series. Bill George won an NFL Championship with the Bears in 1963, and Mo Scarry claimed one with the Browns as a player before taking home Super Bowl rings as a coach for the Miami Dolphins. Coleman Scott (Oklahoma State wrestling and George Messich (Pitt football) each won NCAA Division I team titles.

In wrestling, Jefferson-Morgan's Cary Kolat and Waynesburg Central's Coleman Scott both captured medals on the World's stage. Kolat won Silver and Bronze at the 1997 and 2001 World Championships and competed on the 2000 and 2012 Olympic teams. Scott won Bronze at the 2012 London Olympics and was a four-time member of the U.S. National Team.

Other County wrestlers have won NCAA Division I wrestling titles including: Waynesburg College's George Lewis (1948), and Tony Gizoni (1950,1951). In addition, Tom Alberts (Pitt, 1957), Cary to Penn State and a career in the Nation-

Kolat (Lock Haven, 1996,1997), Josh Koscheck (Edinboro, 2001), and Coleman Scott (Oklahoma State, 2008) won national titles. The Waynesburg College duo of Tony Gusic and Mike Zrimm also won NAIA national titles in 1965.

Thirty-two Greene County boys have also claimed 55 PIAA state titles.

We have also produced a multitude of professional football players. Waynesburg College launched the NFL careers of Paul Frank (Newark Tornadoes, 1930), Mo Scarry (Rams and Browns), Coach Carl DePasqua (Steelers), Harry Theofiledes (Redskins and Jets), Joe Righetti (Browns), Don Hermann (Giants and Saints), and Dave Smith (Steelers and Oilers). Local West Greene products Jack Wiley (Waynesburg College /Steelers), Jerry Yost (WVU/Jets), and John Bristor (Waynesburg College/49ers) represented the Pioneers well. Carmichaels' alum Larry Krutko (WVU/Steelers) started in the Black and Gold backfield in the late 50s and early 60s. However, the most successful of this illustrious group is Waynesburg's Bill George. He was inducted into the NFL Hall of Fame after a 14-year career with the Bears and

I would be remiss if I didn't mention Arena League Hall of Famer Greg Hopkins (Albany Firebirds and L.A. Avengers) and Carmichaels' alumnae Lori Burkholder, who played for the NWFA Champion Pittsburgh Passion from 2002-2009 as members the 20th century, the County was well repof this group.

As one might expect, there have not been as many local basketball players in the professional ranks. Waynesburg High School and College alum Wettie Mancuso played for the Buffalo Bison in the National Basketball League (pre-NBA) in the mid-1930s. West Greene's Rick Sonneborn led the PIAA in scoring before going on al League of Thailand. However, the most successful local professional came out of the Yellow Jacket dynasty of the 1980s. Paul Stanley was one of the greatest players in Australian National Basketball League history. He set and still holds scoring records for the Melbourn Tigers and Hobart Tasmanian Devils. He also played in the World Basketball League for the Youngstown Pride.

In other sports. Jim Rathburn of Carmichaels was on the Professional Bowlers Association Tour in 1974. On the links, Jefferson's Mike Adamson (Golden Bear and Gateway Tour) and Waynesburg's Robert Rohanna (Latino American and Web.com Tours) both played professionally. For almost a decade, Rachel Rohanna has played on the LPGA Tour circuits.

Given the importance and dominance of major league baseball in the first half of resented in the "bigs". Jake Hewitt (Carmichaels/Pirates), Charlie "Piano Legs" Hickman (Taylortown/Giants, Tigers, White Sox), and Alex Pearson (Greensboro/ Cardinals) all played in the majors around the turn of the century. From 1905 to 1937, Art Goodwin (Whitely/Highlanders/Yankees), Joe Knotts (Greensboro/Braves), Birdie Cree (Khedive/Yankees), Pete Knisely (Waynesburg/Reds and Cubs), Lee King (Hundred/ Giants and Pirates), and Leon Pettit (Waynesburg/ Senators and Phillies) had successful careers. Two decades later, Cumberland Township's Steve Korcheck (Senators) and Jefferson's duo of Chuck Coles (Reds) and Dick Gray (Dodgers and Cardinals) made "the show."

The turbulence and tragedy of the 1940s kept another local product from "technically" becoming a major leaguer. However, Greene County's own version of Moonlight Graham will be explored in detail in a separate article next month.

Get Ready for Some Fair Competition!

how off your talents and engage in some friendly competition with your friends and neighbors at the Greene County Fair! The Greene County Fair Home & Garden competitions run the range of the expected - prize vegetables, blue-ribbon canning, or award-winning baked goods, art, and photography—to the unexpected—wheelbarrow decorating, buckets of junk, furniture, beer and more.

This year, there will be some changes to the entry process. Previously, entrants were charged 25 cents per entry for pre-entries. That fee was eliminated and all pre-entries are now free. The due date for pre-entries is July 24. Day of entries will still be accepted and will be $1 per entry. Entrants can also enter online this year and save a stamp. The online entry form and the updated Home & Garden book should be available online around mid-

Calling all gardeners! Prepare your best vegetables, fruits, nuts, grains, and hays. Or enter the floral classes with flowering houseplants, foliage house plants, annuals, perennials, or various artistic arrangements of flowers.

If you prefer canning your harvest, there are classes for canned fruits, vegetables, meats, pickles, relishes, soups, sauces, syrups, and dried foods. Canners are now allowed two entries per class this year. Another section is available for butters, spreads, jams, jellies, marmalades, and preserves. If you create your own honey, maple syrup, beer, and wine, there's even a category for you.

Is baking more your thing? In addition to the special baking contests for angel food cake, apple pie, chocolate cakes and brownies, the fair offers a variety of ways to show off your baked products. Breads, rolls, cakes, cupcakes, candy, pies, noodles, chips, snack mix, cookies and even a cookie jar. Live judging for the baking contests will be held on Sunday evening after the vesper services, catalog, visit GreeneCountyFair.org.

during the opening day of the 2024 fair. "The live judging of the special baking contests is very popular. People like to see and hear the judge's reactions to the entries. The attendees also enjoy sampling the entries after judging is over," says Courtney Hursey, Greene County Fair Home & Garden Committee Member and Treasurer. "We are hoping more people will be able to participate in the competition and be there to see the show."

Crafters and artisans have plenty of competitions to choose from. Artists and photographers can enter their art covering multiple topics and many mediums, including acrylic, charcoal, mixed media, oil, pastel, pencil, watercolor, crayon, pen & ink, digital and more. If you're handy with a needle, there are classes for sewing, crocheting, knitting, cross-stitching, quilts, rugs and more. Other handcrafts include bead work, decorated items, dolls, leatherwork, jewelry, basketry, stained glass, gift wrapping, furniture making, and many more.

If you're looking for something a little more unusual, the wheelbarrow decorating contest is a perfect chance to show off your gardening and decorating skills. To enter, vou'll need to create a garden in a wheelbarrow with live plants only. Decorations may be added to elaborate on your theme. Any size wheelbarrow can be used, and the wheelbarrow should be themed.

Another entertaining contest is the bucket of junk decorating contest. Got some empty buckets around and nothing to do with them? Time to get creative! Take your bucket and make it a work of art by welding, bolting, gluing, wiring, sanding, painting, and/or attaching it to more buckets. Once complete, the work of art must be self-standing. Buckets can be made of wood, plastic, or metal. Both the wheelbarrow and bucket contests will be judged on originality and overall appearance.

While most classes are staying the same as last year, there will be a few modifications. Classes have been added to the plastic block section to separate the kit-built items from the creative design items. They are also adding classes for machine embroidery and knitting.

Check-in/drop off will be on Sunday. August 4 from 8:30am to 3pm. Pickup will be the following Sunday, August 11 from 12 to 2pm. For more information, to submit your entries, or view the updated Home & Garden ay is Mental Health Awareness Month. Throughout the month, various organizations will work to provide support, advocate for mental health their posts green and distribpolicies that prioritize mental well-being, eliminate stigma, ute bulbs and promote public education about mental illness.

Team Hope, Together With Veterans Greene (TWV ing donations for the cam-Greene), and Greene County Mental Health Program are paign at distribution points teaming together to light the way for mental health for our community and veterans. During May, Greene County you would like to donate to landmarks, businesses, and homes will light up green to raise the campaign, donate to the awareness and show support for mental health. Why green? Green is to shine the light on mental health for the community

Last year, System of Care Coordinator Melanie Trauth from the Greene County Mental Health Program brought the idea of a green light campaign back to the System of Care Partnership to discuss. After deciding it was a great idea, they started the campaign to address stigma in Greene County and to bring awareness to mental health and wellness. After hearing about the green light campaign last year, Chris Clark of TWV Greene reached out with an offer of partnership and suicide. this year's light up campaign was formed.

"We are asking the public to join the campaign, to help spread awareness and support. Mental Health is part of everyone's health and it's important to take care of your whole self. We want to shine a light on the stigma, let people know we care, and that help is available to anyone in need," says raise awareness in Greene County. They are very involved in Greene County Mental Health Administrator Brean Fuller.

"Raising awareness is the goal of the campaign. We'd love to see businesses and local organizations get on board and turn their buildings and facilities green throughout May," says TWV Greene's Chris Clark.

It's not just TWV Greene, Team Hope, and Greene County Mental Health Program making this campaign happen businesses and organizations from all over the county are banding together in support. VFW Post 4793 (Waynesburg), American Legion Post 400 (Carmichaels), and American Legion District 25 donated funds to purchase green LED light bulbs. Those organizations will also put green lights outside the post during May and serve as distribution points (starting mid-April) for green light bulbs. Waynesburg Electric Supply Inc. has sourced over 400 bulbs for the campaign.

The partnership is looking to add additional distribution points throughout the county. Chris is visiting multiple veter-the community, especially with helping teenagers and young adults. You can often find Team Hope at Waynesburg University and local high school sporting events.

Together With Veterans Greene (TWV Greene) focuses on providing education and resources about suicide prevention and awareness to veterans, families, and care providers in our rural area. It's composed of veterans, family members, veteran advocates, providers, business owners, etc. "We want to promote the connection between veterans and the services they can call upon if needed," says Chris.

To promote that connection, TWV often holds events. Their most successful and enduring event is Coffee With Veterans. Coffee With Veterans provides a place for veterans to meet monthly, share stories and news, and connect with other veterans. It is held the second Saturday of every month from 8am to 10am, and the location changes as local businesses, veteran organizations, and churches graciously host the event.

> There are no mental health lectures at these events, but the information is there. There are usually members with mental health care experience and clergy present as well.

"The partnership with Team Hope and Greene County's Mental Health Program was a logical move for us," says Chris. "Team Hope brings a similar message to adolescents, young adults, families, educators, and community members. Greene County Mental Health serves

There will be additional events during

May to raise awareness. The Greene County Mental Health Program will host the 16th Annual Community Supports Program Wellness Conference at the Lion's Club Park on May 1 from 10:30am to 3:00pm. On May 30, they will host the 10th Annual Greene County Children's Mental Health Awareness picnic from 3-6pm at the Lion's Club Park. New this year, they will also host the first of four Crisis Intervention Team Trainings for First Responders

"Keep your eye on us. September is Suicide Prevention Month. Don't be surprised to see another campaign between TWV Greene, Team HOPE, and Greene County Human Services in August," says Chris. "[And] we're always looking for new team members and partners in our efforts to bring awareness, education, and prevention to this issue."

Participants are also encouraged to use their green lights again in November to show support for veterans throughout any things can bring is reading a good book. Many exceptional children's books have been written over the years, coming from people of all backgrounds. Angela Wilson has finished her first book, Liam Wants a Pet. Wilson wrote the book, and her sister Roxanna Roberts illustrated it.

The book is about a young boy named Liam who really wants to get his first pet and has to learn about all the responsibilities that come with pet ownership. One of the book's key points is learning about the obligations that come with having and taking care of a pet. Other lessons the book teaches are that hard work pays off, and achieving your goals takes perseverance the goals won't just happen for you. Wilson expects both children and adults can take that away from the book. She hopes to teach that with hard work, you can achieve whatever you set your mind to. Wilson herself was able market. to achieve a longtime goal she had with writing this book.

Wilson said she had wanted to write a book since she was younger. She recently took advantage of the opportunity and, with hard work, published the children's book. It took her about one and a half years to write it, finding time whenever she could to work on it. She said that besides it being a dream and goal of hers to write a book, there was another reason that she wanted to write it: she was writing the book for her children.

One of the hardest parts of the entire process was publication. It was not like anything that she had done before, and it took a lot of research and time. Like most new things, it was a learning process, but definitely worth it in the end to be able to say that she was an author who has a book now on the

If you would like to read the book, you'll find it at the Eva K. Bowlby Public Library to be checked out at any time. The book will also be available during a book signing at the Bowlby Library on May 7, at 5pm. Wilson will also have a reading at the library that evening. If you are not able to make it to May 7 signing, there will be another opportunity at the Barnes & Noble store in Morgantown, West Virginia. The Barnes & Noble signing is May 11 from 1pm to 5pm, with a book reading at 3pm. The books will be available to purchase at the signings for just $15 each.

See You on Wednesdays! The Waynesburg Farmers Market Returns

s I scooted through alleys looking for a place to park and shop Waynesburg Farmers Market last May, I was and shop Waynesburg Farmers Market last Iviay, 1 was on a mission. Spring was here. It was time to visit with old friends, find something homemade and delicious to eat, then grab some exotic plants for my garden, and make a dash for my car. Washington Street was closed to traffic for a block beside the courthouse to accommodate vendors and market shoppers. Harden Family Farm's big truck and rows of tables filled the corner next to High Street and new market manager Scott Hackenburg had his Pursley Creek Farm canopy pitched beside the courthouse wall. He had what I'd come looking for: exotic peppers and tomatoes of every color and size, along with native perennial wildflowers like columbine. Other vendors were selling their own spring collection of plants, flowers, fresh greens, and baked goods that have earned their own loyal following. A food truck at the end of the block was serving sandwiches to a line of office workers out for lunch. All in all, it was a perfect sunny spring day, the kind of day that makes farmers' markets such a beloved part of small town

Waynesburg's Wednesday market sells produce and products produced both locally and regionally. Over the years, its location has moved around the block, from the early years on Church Street, then to High Street in front of the courthouse steps, where street parking spaces were staked out by Waynesburg Borough for 15 minute shopping sprees. During Covid, the market moved to Washington Street, as vendors regrouped and tried to carry on. Hackenburg, who grew up in rural Snyder County and studied forestry at Penn State, retired from the Bureau of State Parks in 2021, just as Covid regulations were lifting. He and wife Rhonda decided to relocate to the Pittsburgh area— "We're big Steeler and Penguin fans!" —and chose Greene County "because of its location, rural character, and available farmland. Vegetable gardening was a big part of my life. I built my first greenhouse when I was 12 years old and sold vegetable and flower plants."

The ten-acre farm they bought near Oak Forest soon had a native plant nursery and a vegetable garden started. When Hackenburg came to the market in 2022 to vend and recognized its potential, becoming the market manager was a natural fit.

I don't shop for homegrown produce in the summer. (Where I live in West Greene, free zucchinis, cukes and tomatoes magically appear in your back seat when you visit friends!) So, when Hackenburg and his intrepid band of market vendors moved last July to Parking Lot #3, beside the Denny House on High Street, I didn't notice. But when I went shopping in October, ready to grab enough sweet peppers and tomatillos to tide me through Thanksgiving feasts and winter salsas, I was delighted to find the market taking up a corner of Parking Lot #3 and pulled right in. It was like a family reunion. Gardens were being stripped, and the canners were out in force, getting the last of the produce stripped from the vine before winter. I found my crate of spectacularly colored peppers that begged to be stuffed and baked for Halloween and said, "Wow Scott! They're perfect!"

By Colleen Nelson

As Hackenburg helped me load boxes of produce into my Forester, he grinned. "I think we'll be back here next year."

On April 5, Hackenburg posted the good news we've been waiting for on the Waynesburg Farmers Market Facebook page.

"The Borough Council has just approved the Market for another season!" at Parking Lot #3, "every Wednesday, 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. from May 15 to October 16."

And hey! If you want to try your hand, and heart, at marketing, the first one's free to new vendors.

"It's $6 to set up for the day and some people might want to try it one time to see how they do," Hackenburg said when I called. This early in the season, growers are busy getting their crops in the ground between rainstorms, and applications are still coming in, he added. "I won't know yet who all's going to be here on opening day, but I know that we're in a better location. We were having issues with parking and public safety when we were on Washington Street. Now the street doesn't have to be blocked and parking signs don't have to be put up. Now we have room to grow."

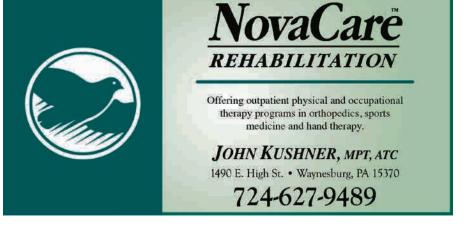

As this story was going to press, Hackenburg texted me the vendors that have gotten back to him so far: Bliss Hollow Farms, Dyers Forks Farm, Harden Family Farm, Juliet's Empanadas, Plum Run Winery, Pursley Creek Farm, Sue's Bakery, What's Smokin' BBQ.

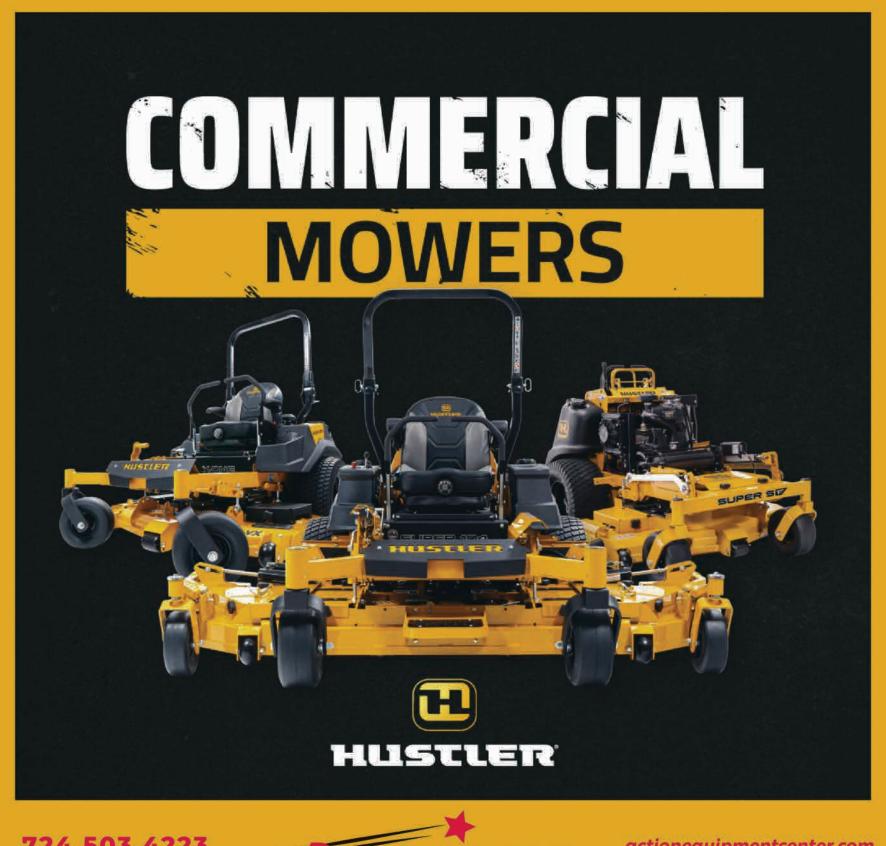

Stay tuned. As opening day gets closer, more vendors will report in on the market's Facebook page.

And yes, the recipe for dandelion dressing that Hackenburg has posted there is delicious with or without bacon crumbles.

Empowering Our Young Entrepreneurs

on Conway, notable start-up current students." She also hop Angel, once said that "Any time is a good time to start a company." And for three young entrepreneurs in Jefferson-Morgan School District, now timid to start a full-time business here is the perfect time to start.

Middle schoolers Chase Litman, Trenton Sowden, and Sam Chulick aren't waiting for later to get a start on their business. They're jumping into small business now, with a little help from the JM Hometown Advantage Grant. The three students are the first participants in the program.

The $100 loan was funded by the Jefferson-Morgan Alumni & Friends association to support the students' businesses: TEC Baits (Chase and Trenton) and Crazy Caricature Drawings by Sammy Chulick. The loan helps the students with start-up costs, supplies, advertising, and more. Once their business starts making a profit, they begin paying back their loan until it is fully repaid. Their repayment helps other students receive startup funds, future entrepreneurs.

Teacher Jodi Fulks wanted to help JM students learn about entrepreneurship, showcase the students' talents, and bring some business potential to our community. She and her husband helped her son create a business when he was 14 years old. "It was the best lot," Chase says. "She chips in, gives us experience for him, and he learned so much in doing so. He currently still has that business, at 25, and is thriving," Jodi says. "I wanted to share some of my you set your mind to it! Just look at my experience in helping my son, with my

She also hoped to build the students' confidence for future endeavors: "If the kids are trying to create a side business now, maybe they would be less in the future."

The grant was originally intended for high school students only, whom Fulks could work with during PLT (personal learning time) weekly - but no high schoolers applied. Trenton and Chase were interested in the loan and approached Mrs. Fulks to ask about applying for the opportunity. Thanks to their enthusiasm, Fulks adapted the application process to include both middle and high school students. Afterwards, she reached out to Sam about starting an art business and encouraged him to apply, as well.

The students had to submit a pitch video to sell their business to Fulks. Both businesses that applied received the grant, and the funds are now avail-

Although she can't meet with the making the grant fund sustainable for middle school students during PLT time (it's only for high school students), Fulks meets with the boys periodically during and after school to help them improve their business, and "to help them make their businesses a success, so they will be able to pay it forward."

> "Mrs. Fulks has helped us out a ideas on where we could go next."

> Greene County. The sky is the limit!"

In addition to the IM Hometown Advantage Grant, the Jefferson-Morgan Alumni & Friends Association awarded other grants in December 2023. The grants were awarded to educators with innovative approaches, chosen based on their outstanding proposals and evaluated through a detailed rubric. Megan Pierce received a 'Recycling Rockets" grant, and Madeline Loring received one for "Mathematics in the Real World - Culinary".

Sam Chulick loves to draw, and his grant has allowed him to start Crazy Caricatures by Sammy Chulick. Fulks reached out to him after opening the grant to middle schoolers and shared that she thought caricatures could be a great idea. "I really like drawing and money! And Mrs. Fulks said that there wasn't anyone around who did caricatures," Sam says.

Sam prepared some samples, his video pitch, and talked with Fulks about how to start the business. He also began doing events. He started with a Book Prom event at the school, then did the JM craft show, Autism Walk, and JM Elementary Art Show. He hopes to do some additional events outside of Jefferson Morgan and will use his grant to buy supplies for future events.

For now, Sam hopes to keep his caricature business as a side job. "I'm involved in band and drama club, and I don't have that much extra time. I would also like to get more practice," he says. "I really liked being able to do this and it did give me some extra money. I have learned how to talk to people and how to be a good salesman."

While Sam isn't working with other businesses yet, "I would like to, if I could. I could maybe teach other kids how to draw."

A year and a half ago, avid fishermen Chase Litman and Trenton Sowden were on a mission to find four-inch worms to use but couldn't find any at local stores. Instead of giving up, they decided to start making their own. They began making them for themselves, as well as giving to other people they knew. That's when they realized they could turn this hobby into a business.

The duo started packaging the worms and began advertising them on their Facebook page. They sell the worms at local events, and usually bring a couple packs to school to sell to other students. Their parents also help spread the word. They spend a few hours on the weekends making and packaging their merchandise. Chase and Trenton plan to use the grant to buy supplies to increase their offerings. They hope to start doing three-inch worms, crawfish, and possibly even designing their own unique molds. "It allows us to experiment with different colors, different styles, and different color patterns," Trenton

"We'd like to go into a store," Chase says. Trenton adds, "A friend of our parents talked to Ozie's about being able to sell our baits there, and we have to go to talk to them."

Other plans are eventually getting a warehouse space, and they hope that the business will grow large enough that they could reach stores such as Bass Pro Shops.

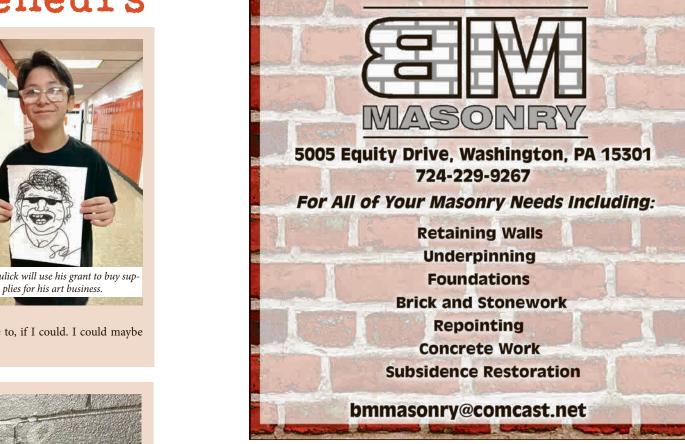

TEC Baits also sponsored the fishing derby at the Waynesburg Sportsmen Club in April. They provided bait packs, as well as live bait they dug up themselves.

How do they feel about being small business owners? "It's great," both boys say in unison. "It feels really good to have that title on your name, to be an entrepreneur," Trenton says.

Chase Litman and Trenton Sowden received a grant to support their business, TEC Baits.

ADVOCATING FOR AMERICA'S FORGOTTEN HORSES

or Julie Whipkey, owner/operator of Hoofprints & Angel Wings Rescue* in Graysville, it all started with a Penny - a pony named Penny, that is - gifted to Julie by Julie was a small child of three when she received Penny, a red and white Paint who lived to a ripe old age, due in no small part to Julie's loving care throughout the years. Since that time, Julie says, "Horses have been a huge part of my life."

At thirteen, Julie saved her money and bought her first auction horse at Hickory Auction in Hickory, PA - "a beautiful buckskin quarter horse I called Honey." Unbeknownst at the time, Julie had gotten a two-for-the-price-of-one deal with her $500; the following year, Honey gave birth to a palomino colt that Julie named Dream Boy.

"Dream Boy became my aunt's trail partner, and Honey was my best friend...we made some great memories over the the SAFE Act [Save America's Forgotten Equines Act], to preyears." Both of these horses, like Penny, lived to a ripe old age.

Despite the distractions and responsibilities that adulthood brings, Julie never lost her passion for horses, especially when it came to saving them from an untimely demise.

"I knew about the horse slaughters, but I hadn't realized how bad it was," Julie relates. After she started researching the subject, she decided she needed to be a part of the solution. With mentoring from some "really amazing advocates," Julie was able to launch Hoofprints & Angel Wings, saving Jill, the first rescue, in 2016.

The United States had horse slaughtering plants up until as recently as 2007, when they were finally closed by State Stature (1). Despite this positive measure, however, unwanted horses are still being shipped out of the country for slaughter (to Canada and Mexico).

"Horse advocates are trying to get a law passed, known as vent horses from being shipped [out of country] for slaughter," Julie says.

In 2016 alone, 114,091 horses were Volunteers help care for the horses and make lasting, shipped to slaughter. In 2023, the number had declined to 17,997, which Julie believes directly results from rescues and sanctuaries.

> Horses that populate the shipping lots are senior horses, or horses of all ages suffering from common ailments like navicular disease (a degenerative condition of the hoof), arthritis, or heaves (a respiratory disease similar to asthma in humans). Many of these horses, after some TLC from people like Julie, could live out their remaining years in relative health in ppeaceful environments.

"The horses deserve a better life, and we are trying to give them that," Julie remarks.

Hoofprints & Angel Wings Rescue currently provides permanent sanctuary to twelve horses, with another horse due to arrive in mid-April.

As most of the rescues arrive underweight and in dire need of medical care, Julie arranges visits from an equine dentist, a farrier, and a veterinarian to assist with the daunting task of rehabilitation.

When donation and/or raffle funds fall short, Julie, who works full time at the hospital, dips into her own finances to cover these very necessary visits, as well as for the cost of feed

"We have changed so many horses' lives!" Julie exclaims. So many so that Hoofprints & Angel Wings motto has become Where We Make Comebacks Stronger Than Setbacks.

It's not just the horses' lives which improve, either.

"Our precious equines have changed a lot of [human] lives over the years," Julie reflects. "Horses have a sensitivity to human feelings, and equine therapy can be a very effective treatment [adjunct] for people suffering from depression, anxiety, trauma, ADHD, autism, and stress. We have several individuals whose lives have been changed by grooming, feeding, or just talking to the horses."

Hoofprints & Angel Wings is open to the public by appointment only. However, the rescue offers annual events like Halloween in the Barn (October date TBA) and Santa in the Barn (December date TBA). New events coming this summer include Meet & Greet at the Rescue: Hawaiian Style slated for June 8 from 12pm-3pm (admission is free!) and Kids' Day at the Barn scheduled for July 27 from 11am-3pm ($5 per child, which includes lunch and a gift bag). Birthday parties can be booked from spring through fall, and volunteer opportunities are always available!

"Volunteers can come out and help groom and care for the horses," Julie says. "Folks can meet the horses and learn how we care for each one

"Running a rescue isn't easy, and it's very costly. It has its tears, and it has its smiles. But," Julie says with a gleam of passion in her eyes, "I promise to love and care for each of them until their last breath."

Out and About During a Greene Spring: Enlow Fork & the 3rd PA Bird Atlas By Colleen Nelson

than ready to take a Sunday drive to State Game canopy would be filled with other nesters, including the elusive southern warblers Lands 302 just to see, pardon the pun, what's up. Ramps, those frisky aromatic wild leeks that spring festivals love to love, were showing, and my mouth was watering. I was ready to snack my way into spring, ready to search out nettles and dandelion greens and check along certain back roads where the wild ramps grow. The annual Spring Fling Wildflower and Bird Walk isn't until May 5, but today I was restless, eager to see how well steep, muddy Smokey Row Road had survived the winter. (Spoiler alert—very well, thank you! The slip was being repaired when I drove down, and the road will nicely graded by May. Come and enjoy nature at its Enlow Fork of Wheeling Creek flows between Greene and Washington counties through a sheltered valley that is deep, steep and utterly gorgeous in springtime. Birders and nature lovers have been pilgrimaging here for decades, and the stream is stocked for trout. The creation of State Game Lands 302 preserved the area's unique, wildlife-friendly habitat for on reports being filed on paper, using the public to enjoy. Hundreds of years ago, indigenous tribes trekked through these hunting grounds, as the humongous 77 three-mile-square "blocks" that make up Greene County's sycamore "trail marker tree" that sits on the Washington count zones. County side of the creek can testify.

All that remains now are some foundation stones and clusters species. of non-native flowers-mainly daffodils-that show where the Fisher family farmhouse once looked down on the creek.

Smokev Row Road once connected Enlow valley to the rest of the world, from Walker Hill Road to the road to West Finley. Now it dead ends where it once crossed the creek for aps created by Cornell University that turn smart phones into the second time. The remaining bridge spans a great stretch of riffles that are perfect for fly-fishing, surrounded by sycamore and buckeye trees. After the stream is stocked in mid April, wildflowers—trillium, squirrel corn, Dutchman's breeches, trout lily, toad flax, phlox, geranium, Virginia bluebells, Greek valerian, larkspur, blue eyed Mary—carpet the valley. Today, early spring beauties and purple horse nettle are busy pushing through the leaf litter. But a single cluster of purple phlox beside a sycamore and one half-opened trillium against the bank let me know that spring was getting ready for the show. High above the trees, an eagle circled. Somewhere nearby, its chicks are already hatched and hungry. Soon the forest

When the first five-year Atlas happened in the 1980s, secluded Enlow valley was discovered to be a priority nesting area, especially for warblers. From then on, the annual wildflower walk slash bird watch became a popular event.

When the Atlas 2 Bird Count finished up in 2009, the differences in nesting populations in 20 years showed species and population decline throughout the state as land usage continued to change.
